Looking towards the future, more people will be living in urban areas than rural areas, for the first time in the world's history. Our work at Jo'burg Child Welfare addresses truly global challenges in a local context. In our imminent Centenary year, we can be proud of our ongoing and committed contribution to children, families and communities in South Africa and indeed, the world as a whole. Through this event we have the opportunity to raise much needed funds which will support JCW with its overall reach which includes 45 000 children and their families served directly, as well as a further 25 000 children indirectly through the OVC Forum (orphaned and vulnerable children). Many of these children have been abused, abandoned, neglected, orphaned or made vulnerable as a result of HIV and AIDS. These funds will contribute on a very large scale towards having a positive impact on improving our children's quality of life. The event will also create public awareness of children in need as well as the mission and cause of Jo'burg Child Welfare, who have been in support of destitute children since 1909.
